1. Introduction:

The Venkateshwar College of Nursing Umrada successfully organized a seminar on "Interpersonal Relationships" on 31st October 2025 (Friday) at the VCON Auditorium. The session aimed to strengthen communication and understanding among students and faculty members, fostering harmony in professional and personal interactions.

2. Objective:

The seminar aimed to enhance understanding and awareness about interpersonal relationships, communication skills, and teamwork within the healthcare environment.

I. General Objectives:

- To develop effective communication and empathy among nursing students.
- To promote healthy interpersonal relationships in personal and professional life.
- To enhance teamwork and collaboration within healthcare settings.
- To encourage emotional intelligence and respect among peers and colleagues.

II Specific Objectives:

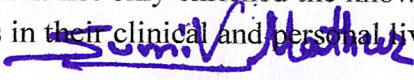

- To understand the types and importance of interpersonal relationships.
- To identify barriers and ways to improve communication in healthcare.
- To promote positive attitudes and cooperation among nursing students.
- To create awareness of how interpersonal relationships affect patient care.

3. Programme Highlights:

The seminar began with a welcome address by the faculty, followed by an engaging session led by Mr. Mukul Choubisa. Through interactive discussions and real-life examples, participants learned about effective communication, trust-building, and emotional balance in relationships. Students actively participated by sharing their views and experiences. The session concluded with an open discussion, vote of thanks, and appreciation remarks from faculty members.

4. Conclusion:

The seminar on Interpersonal Relationships proved to be an enlightening and thought-provoking session that emphasized the importance of maintaining healthy communication and understanding in the nursing profession. It not only enriched the knowledge of students but also motivated them to apply these principles in their clinical and personal lives.
